WHO IS THIS CHILD?

I am the first-born of five children. To my parents, I was the son they had talked about and planned for, and my birth was celebrated by my extended family. However, in the hospital, I was just another baby born with little pomp and circumstance. To my brothers as we were growing up, I could be a confidante and protector at times. I was the oldest and that was my responsibility. At other times, I could be a pain in the neck. This is the time of year when we celebrate the birth of another child, however, many still don't completely understand who this child is.

- The prophet Isaiah describes him as a suffering servant. He had no form or majesty or beauty; despised and rejected by men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.
- Micah predicted that he would be a ruler in Israel. He would shepherd his flock in majesty and strength and would eventually bring them peace.
- The angel, Gabriel told Mary, "He will be great and will be called the Son of the Most High." He assured Joseph that he would save his people from their sins.
- Mary, the mother of Jesus, sang of his character. She praised him for being a blessing, knowing that he would do great things. She gloried in the fact that he was holy and full of mercy, not because of his human ancestry, but his divine heritage.

- The disciples saw Jesus through a variety of lenses based on their own personal expectations. Some saw him as a friend and teacher, some as a deliverer from Roman oppression, and yet others as a means to a different end.
- A Roman centurion at the foot of the cross said, "Certainly this was a righteous man!"
- The apostle Paul initially saw Jesus as an enigmatic leader of a movement called "The Way," that must be stamped out. He later came to acknowledge him as the Son of God and the promised Messiah.

There is no figure in the history of mankind who was so explicit about his identity and yet so misunderstood. He was never intended to be a mystery to us. It may well be that he becomes just what we need at that moment in our lives where everything else is out of focus. And in that moment when we see him for who he truly is, everything becomes crystal clear. The revelation of a child in a manger who is the Son of God and the gift that God gave is truth incarnate.

The Advent of the coming Savior gives us the chance to examine our lives in light of this truth. What are you looking for in this season? Who is this child to you?

Jimmy Stewart, State Director of Evangelism and Church Development

The Necessity of Evangelism

Each year for 22 years, I have had the privilege to conduct an evangelism conference for Alaska Baptist pastors and leaders. It has been a blessing to bring leaders to our state to encourage our churches to make evangelism a priority in their churches. Programming may look and feel a little different this year, but the priority remains the same and is needed more today than ever.

We live in a culture that has changed dramatically over the last 22 years. The seeds of this change began years ago when the Anchorage school district published an article proclaiming “Creation Sciences” would no longer be taught in our schools. Rather, they were firmly committed to teaching the thoroughly secular viewpoint that this world came about by itself. The contention was that to teach a science that had divine intervention at its roots was pure fiction, not science. Thus, God was replaced with a secular mandate that has required young people in public schools to find religion outside those walls. Since dwindling numbers of young people are attending any church, the result is a generation void of moral proclivities, leaving them feeling vulnerable and easily offended. Identity issues and self-awareness issues, exacerbated by social media platforms, have left many young people hopeless. Add the cultural and political upheavals seen across our nation and in DC, and we can all understand the hopeless nature of the young. We must proclaim that true identity comes only through a proper relationship with our Creator. God, through His son, Jesus Christ, has provided the only means of hope and everlasting strength in times of turmoil. We need to make this known more now than ever before. People of all ages are lost and vulnerable without Jesus.

A couple of weeks ago a young man attended my men’s Bible study for the first time. He was brought by his employer who attends the weekly meeting. This 22-year-old gave his life to the Lord that morning. We surrounded him and prayed with him. He met his Creator that morning. God is still in the saving business.

We, who proclaim ourselves to be his pastors and leaders, need to be sure we still believe it. We need to act in faith that God can use any of us to bring the lost to salvation. Romans 10:13-15 says:

13 For everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved.

14 But how can they call on Him they have not believed in? And how can they believe without hearing about Him? And how can they hear without a preacher?

15 And how can they preach unless they are sent? As it is written: How beautiful are the feet of those who announce the gospel of good things! (HCSB)

We are preachers, teachers and leaders who need to lead in discipling people to be “those who announce the gospel of good things!” I invite you to come to the 2024 State Evangelism Conference, February 8-9 at Filipino Bible Church in Anchorage for this year’s conference. Matt Queen, Chair of Evangelism for Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, and Ricky Fuchs, lead pastor of Lane Prairie Baptist Church in Joshua, Texas, will be our guests. The new Evangelism Planning Kit from NAMB will be available for every church. We will take time to look through this kit. Our Theme this year is “Do the Work of an Evangelist” from 2 Timothy 4:5. We will discuss and help you plan a “Year of Evangelism” for your church. My prayer is that this will be the greatest year of evangelism we have seen in Alaska since I have had the privilege to serve as your state missionary. I believe it can be. Look for a letter from me in the mail with information on the conference. We plan to provide meals and hotels. Please join us and as we plan together. Let’s see what God will do this next year.

In 2025, we will celebrate what God has done. I have already invited Tim Dowdy, the leader for Evangelism at NAMB, to join us for that celebration. We are making those plans and hope you will participate.

Call if you have questions. I look forward to great days ahead.

Supporting Baptist hospitals in impacting lostness: A Q&A with IMB's director of Global Health Strategies

By Myriah Snyder

People are dying physically. People are dying spiritually. Many are dying in places where the gospel has never been heard.

This reality is why, in a world of medical advances and government health programs, Baptist hospitals are essential to the Great Commission and Jesus' command to love God and love others.

The International Mission Board (IMB) recently had a conversation with Dr. Tom Hicks, the IMB's new director of Global Healthcare Strategies, during the International Baptist Hospital Consortium in Southeast Asia. This is the first year the IMB has facilitated this meeting.

The IMB continues to seek ways to utilize healthcare strategies to facilitate gospel access, leading to gospel belief and church planting. Baptist hospitals around the world continue to be places of physical and spiritual healing. We discussed this, the significance of the consortium, the necessity of this meeting and more.

While the hospital names are withheld for security reasons, the seven participating hospitals are located around the globe – spanning the Americas, Sub-Saharan Africa, the Asian Pacific Rim and South Asia. One of the more well-known hospitals is Bangalore Baptist Hospital in India, which was founded by Dr. Hicks' predecessor, Dr. Rebekah Naylor, a retired missionary surgeon.

IMB: You've spent the better part of your week at the International Baptist Hospital Consortium. Could you tell us more about it?

Dr. Hicks: In the 1940s and 1950s, Southern Baptists established numerous hospitals worldwide. In the 1980s, 1990s and early 2000s, we transitioned them to national leadership. Just as the missionary task requires an exit strategy, our goal was to equip national leaders to carry on the work. We didn't intend to run these hospitals indefinitely.

In some cases, we've stayed actively involved in the work and support of the hospitals. This consortium provides an opportunity for us to re-engage with all the hospitals, fostering collaboration and mutual support among them.

IMB: It appears that this consortium aims to network these hospitals. How can they support each other, and what's the IMB's role in this initiative?

Dr. Hicks: All seven hospitals represented here face similar challenges. Despite diverse cultures and varying governmental constraints, they share a common mission to be both missional and sustainable. In healthcare, sustainability means being innovative and expanding services and personnel, just as other hospitals do. These hospitals create gospel access where it's scarce, and when they collaborate, they can identify problems, anticipate challenges and share solutions.

Our role is to equip, encourage and facilitate connections. This meeting was made possible through the Dr. Rebekah Naylor Preach and Heal Fund. Al Stubblefield, a renowned expert on Baptist hospitals (he literally wrote the book), serves as the keynote speaker, and we're here to learn alongside hospital leadership, cross-fertilize ideas, address challenges and share wisdom for the future.

IMB: None of these hospitals are in remote areas. They are all in urban areas with access to healthcare. Why is it crucial for Southern Baptists to have these hospitals, and what sets them apart?

Dr. Hicks: First and foremost, most of these hospitals are in countries hostile to the gospel. Their mere presence provides a legitimate platform for believers to work, save lives and address the world's greatest problem — spiritual lostness.

Most of these hospitals have chaplaincy programs. Chaplains work directly with patients and share the gospel during their hospital stay. This gospel presence extends beyond the hospital, as patients are connected to local churches, where they receive continued support and guidance.

The gospel presence doesn't just stop with the patients, though. Many of these hospitals are affiliated with nursing schools, where students are not only trained in medicine but also in cross-cultural work, integrating sharing their faith with healthcare services.

IMB: Do you have any examples of why patients are choosing these hospitals over government-funded facilities?

Dr. Hicks: This week, we've heard from hospital administrators who have answered this question. Patients choose these hospitals because they know they will be truly cared for, regardless of their economic or social status. The patients genuinely feel valued, and the hospitals remain relevant by expressing the love of Christ in every aspect of their work.

IMB: It's clear that these hospitals are doing gospel work. How can Southern Baptists support the work their hospitals are doing?

Dr. Hicks: Southern Baptists can support their hospitals by praying, giving and going.

Pray: Pray for creativity and wisdom in hospital leadership as they strive to be innovative and sustainable. Pray for the well-being of healthcare workers, who, like their counterparts in the United States, face long hours and challenging work. Pray for their continued spiritual strength to be a light in communities where spiritual need is often great.

Go: Consider participating in short-term trips as healthcare missionaries. Check the IMB's healthcare missions page for opportunities.

Give: While these hospitals support themselves, they still need our generosity to keep the lights on in the dark environments where they serve. Support the work they're doing through the Dr. Rebekah Naylor Preach and Heal Fund.
